

George Lindars-Hammond

Reply to Labour Party LGBT Network questions:

1. Do you accept that trans women are women, trans men are men, and non-binary people are non-binary - and will you commit to respecting trans people as their self-declared gender – if so, how will you integrate this approach to tackle the culture of entrenched transphobia, from the grassroots membership up to the leadership?
2. Will you defend the current Labour Party policy and principle of inclusion of Transgender women on All Women Shortlists?

1. "I absolutely believe that trans women are women and trans men are men and I stand in solidarity with all those who are being discriminated against. We must ensure that we adopt policies that uphold this and a programme of broad and inclusive education that helps all members understand the experiences of trans people."

2. "Absolutely, for me there is no question about the inclusion of trans women on All Women Shortlists."

George Lindars-Hammond did not reply to Labour Women's Declaration Working Group questions.